President's Report

Dear Members,

This will be my last entry into the Journal as I stand down from the President Position at the March AGM & I would like to express my best wishes to the incoming President & hope that he or she has an enjoyable time as I did.

The time has just flown, it is very hard to believe that it is twelve months ago that I put up my hand to volunteer to step into a position that I had no idea of what it was about. I must say if it wasn't for the Committee & their guidance it could have been a whole different story.

I would like to thank the membership for their kindness & understanding. You are a very nice group of people.

Well now that Christmas & the New Year have gone, we look forward to Easter. I have cancelled the Easter Monday outing to let members attend to their religious needs & be with family & friends.

I went down to book our rooms at the Frenchville for Christmas lunch that was to be on the 26th November only to find that a group had already booked the room for that date, they beat me by seven days to make the booking so now ours will be a week early on the 19th November 2012, I am telling you now so that you can get in early & mark your diaries. Of course the committee will remind you well before that date.

You will see at the meeting that my face is naked (no beard) this is because I have been diagnosed with sleep apnoea & of course being a mouth breather I have to have a full mask & facial hair will not allow the mask to seal, that is the reason for the bare face.

Well folks that is all from me.

God bless & I will see you at future meetings.

~ John Elson

President.

Do Not Call Register

It was suggested to me at the February meeting that I draw attention to this facility. It does work very well & basically eliminates sales calls on your phone. We have been registered since it started. You can register both landline & mobile phones; either by phone on:-

Editorial

It is regrettable that this issue is somewhat shorter than usual. This is simply because very few submissions have been presented by members & all original items previously held in reserve have now been used, no new material remains.

*Today we have our AGM & all positions on the Executive Committee are declared vacant, awaiting members' nominations to fill them. Only financial members can vote, stand for a position & propose or second nominations.

This will be my last issue of the Journal. I hope that members have enjoyed the many changes I introduced during the last 2 years. Irene & I now need time for ourselves. Our daughter has managed to cope with some significant health issues over the last year or so & will need our ongoing support. She lives in Brisbane. Our son lives in Sydney & we do not see him very often; since I cannot fly it takes almost 2 days just to drive down there. We also have various interstate as well as regional functions & activities which we will be attending from now on. We are already on a first-name basis with the roadworks crews between here & Brisbane. Therefore, we will no longer be able to commit to regular local meetings. I retired in 2009 after some 26 years of working 70 hours or more a week. Holidays were usually just a few days between Christmas & New Year, if that. Only just retired & still struggling with the health issues that forced the early retirement; I was asked to take on the Editor position, barely 3 months after my first attendance at a U3A meeting. With Irene as my assistant I have completely revised the Journal & added a number of new ideas. It is in good shape now & ready for a new Editor, with fresh ideas & new enthusiasm, to take over & apply his or her imprimatur.

A new Editor & Assistant are required, forthwith. New material should be posted to the Secretary (address on page 2) or emailed to u3arockhampton@hotmail.com to ensure it is to hand for the new Editor.

BE WHAT YOU WANT TO BE

From the desk of Professor Scott Bowman
Vice-Chancellor and President

What CQUniversity achieved in 2011 was nothing short of staggering. A highly ambitious set of goals was delivered upon and student numbers grew to the point where we can now be considered Queensland's fastest growing university. Our course offerings expanded dramatically into new areas which will help meet the unique skills needs of each of the communities we serve. Many of our campuses became construction sites as new buildings and major refurbishments went ahead at pace.

We acquired world class research facilities, along with world class researchers, to drive our determined push to become the most engaged research-intensive university in regional Australia.

We equalled our best ever result in the past decade of receiving "five star rankings" – the highest possible ranking - in seven categories in the renowned Good Universities Guide, and we were ranked among the top three Queensland Universities in the category of Teaching Quality. Our alumni once again went on to achieve some truly remarkable things in their respective fields, acting as ambassadors for CQUniversity all around the world.

We welcomed on board our 11th Australian location – The Appleton Institute in Adelaide – along with a strong team of expert researchers who will build that facility into something truly special. And, perhaps one of the most exciting developments to occur in the university's history, was the announcement by the Queensland Government to proceed with the merger process between CQUniversity and the Central Queensland Institute of TAFE to become the state's first dual sector university, and $73.8 million in funding from the Commonwealth Government to help drive the amalgamation.

We are well and truly on a trajectory to where this university deserves to be, and it's hard to see how we can turn back now.

2012 has certainly started off just as strong with QTAC offers up from this time last year and 20 new programs ready to kick off for Term 1.

Please come and visit our Rockhampton campus if you haven't been for a while – I'm sure you will see some very exciting changes - the Library and Engineering precincts have now been fully refurbished, and construction of the Allied Health Clinic is well underway. Visitors now have an easy-to-find 'front door', with a new campus reception located in the commercial centre beside the main car park. Apart from being a central point for visitors, future students and current students can seek directions, guidance and advice from friendly staff members.

There are also plenty of internet-linked computers, maps and brochures to facilitate course and careers advice, enrolments and general campus queries.

I look forward to meeting U3A members throughout the year and thank you all for your ongoing support of CQUniversity. The University is in the midst of a truly exciting phase in its history, but I think I speak on behalf of the entire CQUniversity community when I say that our best days are still ahead of us.

Scott

“Page Five ~ History”

I have received no input for The History Page so I contribute this myself. A very limited look at a rather large & extremely complex subject.

1500 Years of English

English, we all use it every day; I am writing with it, some may feel they are expert in it. Where did it come from? We need to go back a bit. Britannia, a group of islands between the North Atlantic & the North Sea, was a Celtic land, inhabited by Britons. Considerable trading and raiding from all directions by early seafarers from Europe is well known. A suspected (but not proved) visit in the 5th Century BC by the Phoenicians, lead by Himilco searching for the Cassiterides ~ ‘Tin Islands’ has not seen any archaeological evidence of subsequent Punic (Phoenician/Carthaginian) trade. On 26th August 56BC we note the arrival of one Julius Caesar on his initial expedition, followed by invasion in 54BC. Romanisation developed and followed its natural course, including introduction of their language, until the separation from Rome in 410AD. The first English arrived in 449AD. Who? The original ‘England’ was in an area now known as Schleswig-Holstein. A loose confederation of three tribes from Frisia & its neighbouring territories. Angles (the powerful dominant) who lived in the heart of the peninsula between the North Sea & the Baltic, Jutes from further north (Jutland) & Saxons from the south (Holstein) were all regarded as Saxons by the Romans, who only ever encountered the southern tribe & were barely aware of the other two further north. These tribes loosely identified their own League as ‘Englishmen’. The indigenous Celts had already coped with the Roman invasion but this time retreated before the Saxons, to hold their ground in Cornwall, Wales, Scotland & Ireland. The remainder of the mainland was now in the hands of the invaders, mainly soldiers and farmers looking for arable land. For the most part they were illiterate, but with them came their rune masters who brought the runic alphabet. Comprising 31 characters, it was common in Europe at the time. Runes were used for practical marking of property (by carving) and often symbolic, decorative & ornamental purposes. They were not used much for writing. That aspect later fell to the Latin alphabet we are quite familiar with, following its arrival with early Christian Missionaries in the late 6th century. The first written work dates from the early 8th century & shows the absorption of Latin words into English, having been adapted to conform to accepted patterns. Four main settlement groups formed, linguistically related they have been identified in more recent studies as Northumbrian, Mercian, West Saxon & Kentish. The Saxon tribes’ influence not only lead finally to the formation of the English language but a few others, such as Swedish, German & Dutch. In the late 8th century came the marauding Vikings. After years of raids they settled in the Midlands ~ the ‘Danelaw’ & beyond. They introduced many Norse words & expressions over the next 200 years but not many were recorded before historical works dating from c1000-1300; many did not last past the medieval period. 1066, more invaders, the Normans; for the next 300 years the official language was French, although the general population always spoke English. The Gallic influence saw the absorption of an enormous number of French words to replace the old English. Examples: ‘King’ & ‘Queen’ are English, ‘advise’, ‘command’, ‘parliament’, ‘royalty’ & ‘sovereign’ are French, but most of this influence came not from Paris, but Normandy. Incidentally the Normans were so named, as the ‘North Men’ originally; Viking invaders, from the north. French was the language at court & in diplomacy. It remained a compulsory school subject in the English Grammar School system into the latter part of the 20th Century. So did Latin, although a student could choose an alternative subject after their first year or so (circa 1960) unless, like me, they wanted to qualify in the sciences; an aspiring botanist or zoologist certainly still needed it. The wide range of very different dialects & accents in England stems from various indigenous tribes, plus this early history of invasion & settlement.

The importation of words from other languages & sources still goes on. From Spanish we have: alligator, banana, potato, tornado, all of which have made it into international English from North America. English Imperial Colonisation in the 17th & 18th centuries brought the language to its other alternate homes in Australia, Canada, New Zealand, South Africa, West Indies & many more, where it is dominant. Each new area has added its own local words (EG: ‘corroboree’ in Australia) which are now commonly accepted. Air Traffic Control is in English; the whole world uses it, every day.

THE WISDOM OF AGE

As time goes by and we grow old
 There are many stories that must be told
 Of roads we've travelled and places we've been
 Of things we've done and things we've seen
 Good times we've had along the way
 Some not so good I too must say
 We gain much wisdom as we travel
 We encounter many problems to unravel
 This wisdom gained is no load to carry
 But we must go on we should not tarry
 For eighty years I've roamed this land
 Trying to give my mates a hand
 For helping others along the way
 Gives me much pleasure I must say
 These years of travel have taught me much About growing plants and tending cattle and such
 I've worked at many a different job
 Trying to make an honest bob
 As I approach the end of the page
 I think I've gained the Wisdom of Age.

~ John W. Stanton.

THE HYPOCHONDRIAC

Doctor, Doctor, I've cut my thumb. I've bandaged it but it's gone all numb.

Could it be gangrene setting in? It's given me such a fright.

Oh! You say it's feeling numb because the bandage is too tight?

Doctor, Doctor, help me please. All through the night I sniff and sneeze.

Is this a raging, rampant virus and will I soon be dead?

Not true? But I should stop the cat from sleeping on my bed?

Doctor, Doctor, my health's all shot. What dread contagion have I got?

At home I'm hot and cold, I sweat and freeze. It's really scaring!

Is that so! You think my air conditioner needs repairing?

Doctor, Doctor, I've got an ache. To cure it quick what should I take?

I've read about these aches within your innards your internals.

What's the cure? You advise that I stop reading Medical Journals?

Doctor, Doctor, it's me again. I've got it still, my usual pain.

It's twingey now and then. I wish it didn't have to be so.

I need another pack of pills, the pink ones called Placebo.

Doctor, Doctor, they're very good. They do the trick, you said they would.

But make sure they're the pink ones, the blue ones are a bit iffy.

The pinks are more reliable they fix me up in a jiffy.

Doctor, Doctor, you say I'm well, but still, with health it's hard to tell

I know you passed me fit at last week's full examination,

But maybe since that time I've got a new contamination.

Doctor, Doctor, what's that you say? There'll be some changes from today?

No longer will your charge be just the basic scheduled fee?

That Medicare no more will make a full refund to me?

Doctor, Doctor, is that correct? That from now on I must expect

To pay out cash each time I have a surgery consultation?

And that will be the outcome of your charging escalation.

Doctor, Doctor, I don't know how, but I'm feeling so much better now.

My aches and pains and ails and ills are all completely gone.

So, goodbye Doc, you won't be seeing me much from now on.

Computer Club

We now live in an eCommunity, so take every opportunity to learn how to use the technology. One item that will cost you less is a home computer. Nearly everyone can afford a computer with ADSL2 land line or Wireless & if not a satellite connection, a colour Laser printer & the computer operating system is so easy to learn. The computer comes with its own help, or you can look up help on the infinite encyclopaedia called the World Wide Web or you can join U3A & attend Free classes at the Rockhampton Regional Library in Bolsover Street on Thursdays from 3pm to 5pm February to December each year.

What to look forward to: -

This year U3A Members have finetuned Face Book, Gmail, learnt some interesting 'photo shopping' (manipulating photographic images) using Adobe CS4. We have researched the web on holidays, cooking, Emergency Services, house hold smoke alarms, the newspapers, home safety, fixing & cleaning your computer, First Aid, Word Art, Excel, making logos, the weather, Copyright, buying items on line, comparing prices of items available on line, making a Christmas letter with word art & pictures, solar power & alternative energy, energy efficiency, the big chain stores cataloguing methods on the web, Health (Melanomas, eyes, heart, lungs, exercise, sleep) Email, Web Mail, how email works, STS Space flight, Hubble Telescope, food handling & safety items, how to search for what you are looking for on the web & the list goes on & on. Your imagination is the only thing holding you back. Just think of something & look it up, you'll be amazed at what you will find.

This year the U3A members signed on in February, the yearly average was 10 at each class, while the largest class was 15 & the smallest 5. Over a period of 37 weeks at 2 hours a week up to the end of November & each class member was packed with new information to take home.

As a group we also thank Steve & Christine of the COIN Academy for their very valuable input & COIN for the use of the computer room on Thursdays.

A TASTY DROP

*I have put my pen to paper without anger or in haste.
To drink or not to drink is the choice with which I'm faced.*

*But as I take a little sip I grimace with distaste
And wonder with what chemicals this cocktail has been laced.*

I've read about this in the paper and I've watched the news

*And carefully I've listened to the educated views.
When speaking with my neighbours, too I find it no surprise*

*To find they're buying additives its flavour to disguise.
But on the local news one night it gave me cause to think*

*Even cattle led to this will all refuse to drink.
My kidneys need fresh water to flush out all the waste,
But I have tea or coffee now, 'cause I can't stand the taste.*

Writers' Group

The first meeting in February 2012 of the U3A WRITING FOR PLEASURE Group fell on the first Wednesday of the month which was prior to the General Meeting & the 'sign in'. Nine of our original members attended & we had apologies from another three. It was a lively morning interspersed with suggestions, plans, a sharing of writing efforts since our last Workshop along with a cup of tea & an introduction to portmanteau words. Some like 'brunch', 'camcorder', 'chortle', and 'email' were already familiar to us; but others had us stretching our brain cells & wondering how long they'd stay included in our modern dictionaries

Our next get-together at the School of Arts will be on March 7th with John Fletcher of the Historical Society as our Guest Speaker.
